CTU Telecommunication Academy project once again surpassed previous years in 2025. The Academy held a record 303 lectures focused on digital literacy, online security, and orientation in telecommunications and postal services. A total of 7,188 people, including 4,014 children and adolescents, participated in the educational activities.

The Telecommunication Academy has long focused on educating different generations. In addition to traditional lectures for seniors, activities aimed at children, young people, and their parents have also reached the same level in 2025. The content of the lectures responds to current developments in the digital environment and places particular emphasis on preventing risky behaviour on the Internet, cyber security, critical thinking, and strengthening user independence. Lectures aimed at children and parents have received an excellent response.

A significant role in the success of the project is played by a team of 17 experienced lecturers from the CTU staff, who are able to explain technical topics in a comprehensible manner to various target groups. The lectures are held throughout the Czech Republic and are provided free of charge.

In 2025, the Telecommunication Academy further developed cooperation with universities of the third age, primary and secondary schools, libraries, municipalities, the Police of the Czech Republic, non-profit organizations and other public administration institutions. The project also joined the global Partner2Connect initiative under the auspices of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), thereby strengthening the international dimension of the CTU's activities in the field of digital inclusion.
