Strategic transformation continues

Bnode continued to advance its strategic transformation during the quarter, At Bpost, the modernization of the distribution model progressed further as the company moves towards a parcel-led operating model. The OOH-network also continued to expand, bringing the company closer to its accelerated target of 3,500 locations by year-end 2026. In retail, the service offering was further broadened through new products and services, including telecom and home security solutions, while discussions with the Belgian State regarding the next Management Contract remain ongoing.

Together, these initiatives support Bnode's efforts to strengthen competitiveness, improve operational performance and create sustainable long-term value.

Outlook for 2026

Bnode today revises its FY26 adjusted EBIT outlook to approximately EUR 140 million.

The revised outlook primarily reflects the updated assessment of the April strike impact, now estimated at approximately EUR 25 million, compared with the preliminary estimate of EUR 15 million communicated in May.

It also reflects slower-than-expected commercial development within Paxon, particularly in North America, partly offset by additional optimization and cost-saving measures at Corporate.

The outlook for Landmark Global remains unchanged. The revised guidance does not include any potential impact from future EU import duties or further macroeconomic and geopolitical developments.
