Today at Gemini at Work 2026, Google Cloud announced the Gemini agent, a universal agent for work.

With Gemini, work now starts in the prompt window:

- Gemini has all of an organization's business context and can be used for everything from knowledge work to answering questions, and content creation to coding, all from a single prompt box.
- It plans the work, uses skills and tools, connects to Cloud customers' business systems, and brings back something finished — inside the documents, the inbox, and the developer environments they already work in.
- It chooses the best model for the job, has built-in cost controls, and most importantly, has the security, administration, and governance required by enterprise customers.
